The grass isn't just greener in Dallas—it's growing. Everything's bigger in Texas, including our parks. There are plenty of wide-open spaces for being active and enjoying the great outdoors with even more on the rise. Dallasites have access to countless outdoor activities—you won't have to go far to find your favorite spot.

Dallas has more than 230 sunny days a year, and lots of sunshine means lots of time to be outside at sprawling parks, green spaces, and lakes. Downtown's Klyde Warren Park isn't just a green space—it's an award-winning innovation with a performance pavilion, restaurant, walking trails, children's playground, water features, and much more. But we haven't forgotten about our fur friends! The region also has more than two-dozen dog parks with features for small and big pups.

The Dallas Region is shores galore. Our lakes are prefect for water sports enthusiasts who are seeking a place to go swimming, fishing, boating, jet skiing, or windsurfing. Don't want to take a dip? Surrounded by more than nine miles of trails for biking, walking, and running, White Rock Lake sits on 1,015 acres and boasts views of downtown Dallas.

Take a swing at one of 100-plus private and public golf courses in the region. You don't have to be a pro to play these courses—many focus on different skill levels and price points. If you're more of a spectator, the Dallas Region hosts two PGA Tour tournaments each year. Obscure-yet-public spaces still exist in the Dallas Region. The Say Yes to Dallas team has compiled a list of the region's hidden gems, offbeat eats, and best events in the region.
